

specializes in treating liver diseases

Gastroenterologist

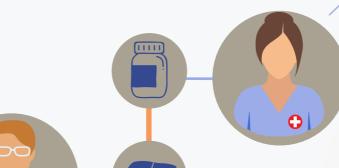

specializes in diseases of the GI tract and liver

Primary care physician

coordinates care from specialists and manages chronic conditions

Physician assistant

provides care under a doctor's supervision, including prescribing meds, ordering lab tests, performing exams

medications Infectious disease specializes in preparing and dispensing prescription

Pharmacist

specializes in treating infections

specialist

Transplant surgeon

specializes in surgery to replace organs like your liver

Nurse practitioner

provides care under a doctor's supervision, including prescribing meds, ordering lab tests, performing exams

Social worker

trained to help patients and families coordinate care

of Your Health Care

Your health care team can answer your questions and offer support as you treat your hepatitis C. These professionals can be great resources for you and help you manage life with chronic liver disease.

Reviewed by Neha Pathak, MD WebMD 10/26/2022

American Liver Foundation: "Treating Hepatitis C," "Hepatitis C Information Center.' American College of Gastroenterology: "Hepatitis C FAQs." Stanford Health Care: "Liver Clinic (Hepatology)."

Mayo Clinic: "Liver transplantation for chronic hepatitis C: how common is it?" "Hepatitis C."

American Academy of Family Physicians: "Family Physicians Can Manage Adults With Hepatitis C." ExploreHealthCareers.org: "Pharmacist."
Hepatitis C Support Project: "A Guide to Hepatitis C: Preparing for Treatment."
Columbia University Department of Medicine: "Social Work/Transportation Resources."